Description:

From This sequel to Fairy Dust and the Quest for the Egg (2005) returns children to Levine's Peter Pan-inspired Fairy Haven. Given the long gap between books, readers may struggle to recall details of the first plot, upon which Levine heavily builds without providing much backstory. But once Tink and her fairy pals bring a havoc-wreaking magic wand back to their community, readers will become sufficiently absorbed to forgive the bumpy start. Full-color artwork supplies the lavish visual element that is a major draw of the Disney Fairies series. Grades 3-5. --Jennifer Mattson --This text refers to an alternate edition.

About the Author When Gail Carson Levine was growing up, her favorite book was Peter Pan by James M. Barrie, and she thought Wendy was an idiot for wanting to leave Neverland. Gail has been reading fairy tales all her life, but she didn't start writing them until she was grown up. Her eleven books for children include Fairy Dust and the Quest for the Egg, Newbery Honor-winning Ella Enchanted and the picture book Betsy Who Cried Wolf. She lives with her husband, David, and their Airedale, Baxter, in a two-hundred-year-old farmhouse in New York's Hudson Valley.

David Christiana has illustrated more than twenty picture books for children, four of which he wrote, including the innovative White Nineteens. He lives in Tucson, Arizona, with his wife, Kristy Atwood, and teaches illustration at the University of Arizona. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.
